Welcome

Bienvenue

ようこそ

Working in IT in an international environment is demanding. Requirements are high in terms of technical skills, communication skills, and versatility.

With Dirox' success relying almost entirely on the productivity and talent of our staff, well-being in the workplace is nothing more than a condition sine qua none.

This is particularly true for a booming country like Vietnam. With so many opportunities on the job market, and with an considerable turn-over, it is all the more important for us to care about that matter, and reward our people's loyalty and performance accordingly.

Today, we want to share with you our take on Employee Well-Being, inside and outside our company, and how we work for the greater good of our staff and their home country.

Olivier Hertu, Dirox Vietnam CEO

Pros

- Open-minded and trustful management that gives you space for new ideas and initiatives. - Real company culture with workshops, events, and trips. - Professional & personal development opportunities sponsored by the company. - Fast-moving company, on the lookout to expand its markets and services. - Employees can arrange their schedule pretty much how they want, choose their own seat at the office, and work remotely.

Cons

- International environment, but with unequal levels of English amongst employees. Fortunately, free English courses are available.

Good company, sociable environment, good benefits

  Recommend

June 2021

What I liked

- The environment is sociable, friendly, all colleagues are easy to deal with. Free soft drinks (I drink every day =>)), coffee, meals every end of the month. The boss and colleagues are Vietnamese and foreign, but everyone is good. The security guard and the janitor are also very nice.
- In terms of facilities, it's ok, the computer provided by the company is generally strong, running smoothly
- Regarding learning, depending on your project and Lead, you will learn a lot or a little, not as much. vertical contribution so don't worry, if you want to do Tech or learn any Tech, just raise everyone will support the worthy OT Salary (x2 for weekdays and x3 for holidays)

Suggestions for improvement

The parking lot is shared with students, so there are many time frames that are quite crowded, but if you are cute with the aunts and uncles out there, there is no need to worry.
